But it soon encompassed sub-prime and prime mortgages, home equity loans, real estate, unsecured consumer credit, leveraged loans, municipal bonds, industrial and commercial loans, corporate bonds and derivative markets. Increasing complexity, loss of control and regulation were clearly reflected in debilitated rich worlds financial system, plummeting stock markets, stoppage of inter-bank lending, closure of money and credit markets and failure of many banks. There were large lay-offs, unemployment, poverty, homelessness and social misery. All the advanced economies were characterized not just by recession and a severe financial and banking crisis but also...
